One Claim Form, Two Signatures

Easy to complete. Sections for both the 'Employer' and 'Employee' on the same Claim Form.

When to submit a Claim Form

A claim form should not be submitted until you know the employee will not be returning to work before the end of the deferred period. However, the longer we have to validate a claim makes delays payments less likely.

The Claim Form must be received by us no later than six months after the end of the deferred period.

Help us, help you

The biggest delays are encountered whilst waiting for medical evidence to be provided.

Save time and send us copies of any medical evidence you have.

Further Medical Information

We may contact both employer and employee for information to help speed up our decision making process.

If we do need obtain information from any medical advisers we will let you know within five working days

We pay for any evidence needed to validate a claim.

Final Assessment

Our final decision will be confirmed in writing.

Accepted Claims

Payments made direct to the employer on a monthly basis

For any claim in payment to continue both the employer and employee must follow any Return to Work plan in place.

Declined Claim

Full explanation provided with appeals process in place.
